Aims and scope

Ranked as an 'A' journal in the Australian ABDC list (see here)

Current Issues in Tourism encourages in-depth discussion and critique of key questions within the subject of tourism. It offers a readable format for normal and extended length peer-reviewed papers, commentaries, letters, research notes, and reviews, all designed to spark off further debate. It contains both applied and theoretical work that addresses tourism inquiry, method and practice. Lively and rigorous, it welcomes contributions from the broad gamut of subjects that make up the stuff of tourism studies.

Current Issues in Tourism is designed to be accessible to both new and experienced researchers and practitioners on a global basis. The principal aims of the journal are to:

- encourage the full range of approaches which are available to the study of tourism;
- bring together researchers from different subject backgrounds for interdisciplinary and post-disciplinary debate;

Current Issues in Tourism

- disseminate new approaches, concepts, frameworks, methods, models and practices which encourage papers that fall outside our scope. For example, we receive a number of hospitality, leisure, and events papers many of which make no connection to tourism—only those hospitality, leisure, and events papers that make connections to tourism will be considered for review.

Abstracting and indexing

In addition to general papers, Current Issues in Tourism features four other sections - CIT Research Letters, CIT Research Notes, CIT Reviews and Current Issues in Method and Practice.

To find out more about these sections, including how to submit material, please click here. The journal has introduced Current Issues in Asian Tourism (CIAT), which are regular specific issues dedicated to papers on tourism in Asia, as well as other themes issues.

The journal aims for a rapid turnaround of submissions and encourages short commentaries and rejoinders. In addition to normal length submissions the journal also welcomes extended peer-reviewed papers on a single topic that combine detailed literature reviews with substantive empirical research and/or policy analysis. Occasional special symposia issues will also be produced focusing on a special topic. In the 'CIT Research Letters' section, the journal is keen to encourage shorter pieces focussing on issues of the moment or early notice of research findings. We also welcome supplementary material in the form of video, audio, photographs, and additional information about data that is not otherwise included in the paper.

Peer Review Statement

Every article within the remit of the journal is peer reviewed anonymously (double anonymous peer review) by a minimum of two experts.

Statement of Inclusivity

Researchers and students of tourism are members of a broad human community and may

Current Issues in Tourism

We affirmatively declare our support for an academic research community that is open to, and committed to, the advancement of research that is relevant to the field of tourism.

"Current Issues in Tourism is one of the world's foremost venues for the dissemination of innovative, scientific research related to all aspects of tourism. Now in its thirteenth year, CIT has proved its position as a world-class journal time and time again. The global breadth and high quality of articles that appear in the journal set it apart from other publications in the field. It has gained considerable visibility and is highly regarded among scholars involved in the social science of tourism for its erudite focus on timely issues that affect all tourism places and players. The impact and influence of Current Issues in Tourism has been felt for more than a decade. No doubt it will continue to provide enlightened scholarship for decades to come."
